It's been 112 years since a virus killed most of humanity. Books have disappeared...all of them? No. Our protagonist discover an entire library in a bunker, as well as the lie used as an excuse to make them disappear.

This is the story of Claudius, the creator of all children's stories, and of Mateo, a little boy who will have to find the lost tale. His mission is essential to ensure that humanity is able to continue conserving all of its children's stories.

Claroescuro, founded in 2010 by Julie Vachon and Francisco de Paula Sanchez, is a theatre company that uses puppets, masks and live music to tell stories in which light is one of the main characters. Claroescuro believes in the union of the arts, and in the magic of tales that were transmitted from parents to children in the soft light a candle or a fire to help the latter confront life in all its fullness and with all its dilemmas. It also believes in the liturgy of theatre as a means of establishing a dialogue with and transmitting emotions to the audience.
