Lovo brings to stage the conservation and protection of biodiversity, analysing the process of the disappearance of an animal species as if where the extinction of a love. The show proposes a vision of the consequences of the destruction caused by human beings in Nature, the changes that occur in habitats that we share with other animals and that demonstrate, in addition, the vulnerability and fragility of human life. We immerse ourselves in the depths of another living being as if it were its soul, in a biography, or in the deepest and darkest corners of the heart.
Teatro Lafauna was created in 2013 by Carlos Cazalilla as a theatrical project. Its creative motor is an interest for researching puppets and the different languages of live arts. The wealth and diversity of visual and artistic codes, the study of movement of puppets, the composition of the dramaturgy, the design of the sound space are the elements with which the company tries to immerse spectators in an intense stage experience.
