Unorthodox and irreverent, Kiko Veneno is the author of some albums that are essential to understand the history of music in Spanish. His participation in Camarón de la Isla's mythical album La leyenda del tiempo set the scene for the singer-songwriter's subsequent work. Born in Figueras, he has lived in Andalusia since he was very young and has been composing for more than forty years for himself and for other artists, daringly exploring musical territories ranging from electro pop to the most avant-garde flamenco.

Kiko Veneno is back on tour to perform his most popular songs in acoustic format, with pieces from his beginnings in 1977 with the group Veneno up to his most recent album, Sombrero roto (2019), including his international "Volando voy", his classics "Echo de menos", "Joselito", "Mercedes Blanco", "Lobo López", "Memphis Blues", and the most recent songs such as "Dice la gente", "La vida es dulce" and "La higuera".
