In semi-hidden premises of an old neighbourhood, a group of women, led by the mysterious Dionysia, get together in the afternoon around a clandestine game of bingo. The game is an excuse to meet, have tea, tell each other their misfortunes, share their happiness and flee from their sad, monotonous reality. But a police agent is determined to have the premises closed. They will look for a solution to avoid that, and along the way, will have unexpected surprises and encounters leading to a tragic and savage ending. .
The work of Las Niñas de Cádiz' is based on their roots and the fusion of elements of popular culture and folklore with other elements of the so-called high culture. But always with humour. "For us, humour is a way of looking at life, of understanding it, of feeling it…It is the inheritance received in Cadiz, millenary land whose idiosyncrasy never ceases to inspire us. "There was a world from your village", said Tolstoy. Our own name is a declaration of principles: an explicit reference to the puellae gaditanae, famous dancers and singers of the Roman Empire. Women artists who were popular, irreverent, provocative and free."
