Humour, theatre, live music, history and a great deal of interaction with the audience. Aristotle mentioned in his Poetics that tragedy and comedy stemmed from dithyrambs and phallic chants in honour of Dionysius, the god of wine and theatre. The chants were performed by a kind of soloist actors and a chorus of women proud to be free, the maenad transformed into Roman bacchantes with the passage of time. Following Oh Vino and Hambre, this surprising, loutish, emotional and funny theatrical Bacanal with live music and gastronomy.
