"Two characters come on stage to speak to each other.

Los que hablan seeks to discover, after all traces have been deleted, the original character's stage experience, the first speaker's visceral experience. The mould is the model. To present before spectators pre-cultural beings, always fragile, on the tightrope, never dejected, before succeeding in becoming someone; to show human beings suspended, unsteady. To dispossess them of this absurd security desperately obtained, and witness their intents and their honest failures. We allow others the pleasure of observing with tenderness everything that human beings have added to the soul, in the interest of ego. This is the sacrifice that we propose." Pablo Rosal
